From Emails:

Al Campbell:

This is an instrument approach to an airport in New Zealand that is covered by clouds. Gives you a glimpse as to what happens in instrument only flying conditions.

Remember where the plane is pointed as it enters the clouds and how unforgiving mountains can be if you hit one.

A Young Eagle flight by: Barry Campbell

I thought I would share with you a young eagle flight that I was able to do after our last event. A family came to the event and their two special sons love airplanes. However the eldest son was reluctant to fly, and wanted to see the airplane fly first, so I asked Ben Elkins to go up with me. When we got back the youngest boy was eager to go, not so his brother. The Flight with Luke, went great and he had a great time. They went home and the eldest said he would like to fly , so they came back but we had already ended the event. Well, they contacted Bruce and we made arrangements to fly Seth and his Mother. The weather was pretty good and the flight went very well, Seth asked lot's of questions and for me it was a very satisfying experience, the kind that makes yer day!
